GOERING PROCLAIMS NAZI AIR FORCE BEST IN WORLD; SAYS HITLER TO DEMAND SUDETENS

Maines' Election And 12 Primaries Due Next Week

President's Efforts to Defeat Senators Tydings, George Top National Primary Interest for Democrats

Other Campaigns

Senator Adams, Colorado, Court Opponent, Is Lone Candidate on Party Ballot

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—Primary or nominating conventions in 12 states and Maine's general election are to be held next week. No senators will come up for re-nomination.

Topping the other primaries in national interest because of President Roosevelt's efforts to bring about the defeat of Senators Millard E. Tydings and Walter F. George are those in Maryland and Georgia.

Maryland Democrats on Monday will write their answers to the President's plea to unseat Tydings as a conservative and replace him with Representative David J. Lewis, as the Democratic nominee for senator.

Georgia will vote Wednesday. In that state the Chief Executive gave his political blessing to Lawrence Camp, United States district attorney who is trying to unseat Senator George.

Former Governor Eugene Tamm, for years a political factor in Georgia, also seeks George's place, as does William G. McRae, Atlanta attorney. A run-off primary, if necessary, will be held October 5.

Voters in six other states will nominate Senate candidates on Tuesday. These are Arizona, Colorado, New Hampshire, Utah, Vermont, and Washington.

Senator Adams (D., Colo.), who opposed the President's court proposals, is the lone candidate on the Democratic ballot in Colorado.

Other senators up for re-nomination are Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), Fred H. Brown (D., N. H.), Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), Ernest W. Gibson (R., Vt.), and Homer T. Bone (D., Wash.).

Louisiana and Michigan also will hold primaries Tuesday, but there is no Senate contest in Michigan and Senator John H. Owen already has been declared the Senate nominee in Louisiana.

South Carolina has a runoff primary Tuesday for Democratic nominees for state offices.

On the same day, Connecticut Democrats will open a state convention. Supporters of Senator Longran (D., Conn.) say he is endorsed of enough votes to win re-nomination. Longran has appointed some administration measures.

Connecticut Republicans will select their candidates at a convention Friday and Saturday.

The Maine election is on Monday. Three representatives to Congress, a governor and numerous state officials will be elected. Because of its Republican consistency in recent years, the Maine election has lost standing as a political barometer, but national leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties have been busy there in recent weeks.

Widow Is Beneficiary

Hamilton, O., Sept. 10 (AP)—Margaret Culbertson Scripps, widow of Robert Palmer Scripps, publisher who died last winter, will receive half title to his estate of $3,033,567, according to an appraisal on file in probate court today. Stocks included $2,000,000 in the Robert Scripps Company, a holding company for the Scripps-Howard newspapers, and 910 shares of voting stock in the Buffalo Times, valued at $194,400.

Moral Solution Advanced

Interlaken, Switzerland, Sept. 10 (AP)—The idea of a moral solution rather than an economic solution to problems of labor, unemployment, distribution and trade was held out today by business members of the Oxford group. Eric Robey, London businessman, said "we need an entirely new intent for business" and "the aim of business must be to distribute God's gifts so as to support all needs to God's guidance."

Federal Prisoner Held Here

Antonio Pagliara, arrested in Schenectady by federal agents on conspiracy charge, was held in the Ulster County jail over night. He had been brought to Kingston for arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Arthur C. Connelly, but because of the latter's illness was taken to Albany this morning for arraignment.

Last Rites For Cardinal in St. Patrick's

This impressive view of the interior of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York city was made during funeral ceremonies for Cardinal Hayes, whose body rests on a bier at the end of the center aisle nearest the altar. The procession is moving slowly through the nave toward the sanctuary, preliminary to celebration of the solemn pontifical requiem Mass.

Cardinal's Body Entombed Today

Small, Sealed Crypt Under Main Altar in Cathedral Is Final Resting Place

New York, Sept. 10 (AP)—The body of Patrick Cardinal Hayes, the beloved "Cardinal of Charities," was entombed today in a small, sealed crypt beneath the main altar of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The cardinal-patriot was buried yesterday afternoon after a six-hour ceremony that rivaled the greatest in New York history.

Celebrities from all walks of life, high churchmen, soldiers and sailors and common folk joined in the funeral rites that hushed the roar and bustle of Fifth avenue. They came 50,000 strong, police estimated, but only 8,000 managed to get into the cathedral.

Today saw the red hat of the cardinalate hanging high in the sanctuary of the church where tradition says it must remain until crumbled by time.

Three cardinals, led by George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, a life-long friend of Cardinal Hayes, 14 archbishops, 53 bishops and more than 2,000 priests represented the church at the ceremony.

President Roosevelt was represented by Postmaster General James Farley and WPA administrator Harry Hopkins. Governor Herbert Lehman and his wife, State Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., and former Governor Alfred E. Smith were present.

Police estimated that more than 300,000 had viewed the Cardinal's body since his death at Monticello, Sunday. Transportation companies said the visitors came from every section of the country.

Weather Outlook

Weather outlook for the week beginning Monday:

Dredging of Rondout Is Scheduled to Start; Field Work Completed

Dredger DeWitt Clinton Will Crew of Workers Will Leave Albany Tomorrow Evening

Dredging of the Rondout Creek for 3,900 feet terminating at the western end of Island Dock will begin Monday or Tuesday, it was announced today at the office of Major C. W. Ball of the U. S. Engineers' office at Albany.

Current plans call for the removing of 60,000 cubic yards of soft material and 491 cubic yards of ledge rock and the work will be carried on for about two months. A fund of $30,128.50 is now available for the project and it is expected that 50 men will be employed.

The original appropriation of $15,000 was boosted to more than $50,000 last month by allocation of funds from other projects, a representative of the Albany federal office said, and the plans call for an extension of the work formerly done in which only 2,600 feet of the creek was dredged.

Additional Fund

An additional fund was made available for the work here, it was stated after it was found that all bids received under the original allotment were excessive. These bids were above the 25 per cent leeway allowed by the government and were offered by private concerns.

Because of the fact that bids were excessive it was finally decided that the dredging work will be done by equipment of the federal government with hired labor and an additional $21,000 was allocated for the project last month.

The dredging boat, DeWitt Clinton equipped with a 20-inch pipe-line dredging system will leave Albany tomorrow night manned with a crew large enough to begin the project. It was stated (Continued on Page 12)

Sanctions 'Battle' at Geneva

Great Britain, France Prepared to Defend League Covenant Against Attack of Scandinavian Nations, Belgium, Netherlands Who Oppose Article 16 Bitterly

Geneva, Sept. 10 (AP)—Great Britain and France, determined to keep every road open in the midst of the Czechoslovak crisis, closed the opening gun today in the League of Nations "battle of sanctions."

Delegates of the Scandinavian nations, the Netherlands and Belgium, voted at last in October to start a bitter offensive against the League of Nations, which provides for these punitive measures against aggressor nations.

The large League powers, however, apparently convinced the punitive machinery would be a valuable aid to them in a future move, went into action in advance of the first public session of the League assembly next Monday.

Their spokesman said that each nation they could agree to each member would participate in some form to the extent that each saw fit. Britain and France, their spokesmen said, were willing to incorporate such an idea in a resolution, but that was the most they could do.

The neutral bloc spokesmen promptly replied that was not enough. "They cannot keep us quiet with Japan."

The French and British also set out to block China's threat to call the council to appeal to the League for material help against Japan.

Education Board Selects Engineer And 3 Janitors

Lebert Is Named Engineer; Ringwald to Head Janitors Aided by Silks, Sharp and Decker at New School

An engineer and three janitors were named last evening for duty at the new Myron J. Michael School. One of the janitors will be assigned to duty at the high school and Charles A. Ringwald of 33 West O'Reilly street, one of the janitors at the high school now, will be assigned as head janitor at the new school at a salary of $1,500.

Harry T. Lebert of 607 Broadway was named as engineer at the new school at an annual salary of $1,300. His name headed the list submitted to the board by the local CIVD service board. Mr. Lebert is 28 years old, a graduate of Kingston High School and also a marine engineering school and has been employed as a marine and heating engineer for the past five years.

Silks Appointed Joseph E. Silks of 153 Smith avenue was named one of the janitors. His name headed the eligible list and being a war veteran he is entitled to preference. Mr. Silks is commander of Kingston Post, American Legion, and at present is employed as a truck driver by the Board of Public Works. Since he was wounded in France his war record made it mandatory that he be appointed.

James A. Decker of 30 Andrew street and Leslie Sharp of 197 Dows street were named as the other two janitors. The men were appointed in the same order in which their names appeared on the eligible list submitted. Salaries of the new janitors will commence at $1,200. Decker is a painter and Sharp is employed as a mechanic at the Universal Road Machinery Co.

The other two names on the engineer list are Joseph F. Bradley of 114 Grove avenue and Frederick J. Albright of Ravine street.

ITU in Convention

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 10 (AP)—The International Typographical union opened its 82nd annual convention here today with a proposed "universal 5-day law" among major items of business.

The "5-day law" would provide that all future union contracts call for a 10-hour weekly work period. Other issues scheduled for discussion were ITU relations with the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor and readiness in wage-hour agreements.

There was a small attendance at the meeting of the Ulster County Taxpayers Council, at the Stuyvesant Hotel Friday night. In the absence of President Herbert Sears, George J. Mutar, former president, presided at the informal discussion which was held.

Fuehrer's Air Minister Pounds War Into 25,000 Listeners Today at Nurnberg Following Hitler's Pulse-Feeling Speech—Could Stand 30-Year Siege

SCORES MOSCOW AND JEWS

Goering Boasts Germany Has Over Abundant Crop of Grain—Calls Armaments Industry 'Gigantic'

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 10 (AP)—Air Minister Hermann Goering praised Germany's air force as the best in the world today as Nazi spokesmen declared Adolf Hitler now would demand nothing less than outright annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten Germans.

The air minister in a 90-minute speech pounded war into the consciousness of his 25,000 hearers of the labor front at the Nazi Party congress with references to Germany's air might, her strong fortifications, and her ability to withstand a blockade "if it lasted 30 years."

Germany he declared was invincible and Czechoslovakia is not a cultured state. He was the first convention speaker to directly refer to Czechoslovakia.

His hearers cheered themselves hoarse and gave the air minister an ovation such as only has been given to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler when Goering shouted:

"What our Fuehrer does is always right, therefore we will follow him wherever he leads us."

Regarding German aviation he asserted, "Our air force is technically the most perfect and numerically the strongest from the viewpoint of morale and the most ready to give all for the fatherland of any country in the world."

France Is Apprehensive

Paris, Sept. 10 (AP)—France watched anxiously today for Great Britain to make a move that might convince Adolf Hitler there was a hope of a way out of the European war.

British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson's possible call on the German chancellor was the center of French attention, accompanied by the hope he was empowered to go far enough to leave no doubt in Hitler's mind that Britain would back France with all its might.

Although French attention had been relatively undisturbed during the Czechoslovak crisis, a new point of worry came up today when the Italian government ordered French troops to evacuate properties on the Italian side of the frontier by October 1.

Similar clearing out of French farms and homes from Italian territory took place only last month.

These orders to leave now by the country of Italian fortifications were cited in the Mont Cenis region, while the previous orders affected the neighborhood of Tola, to the south.

Leading French newspapers noted today France would fight to prevent German invasion of Czechoslovakia, but suggested such invasion could be prevented by neutralization of the central European republics organized as a federated state.

These newspapers, many of which are edited by persons close to the government, considered both openly or indirectly the possibility that France might accept such a solution as the last means of preventing war.

The Nazis have proposed that Czechoslovakia renounce her defensive alliance with France, Russia in exchange for neutralization guaranteed by Germany, Italy, Britain and France.

Meanwhile, tons of steel were trucked into Paris to build bunkers and public buildings against possible air attacks. The interior ministry rushed plans for distribution of gas masks to civilians.

No Wailing Wigwags

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—Officials at the office of Indian Affairs put their ears to the ground today and failed to detect a single wail from a wigwag over the disappearing Indian model. The 25-year-old Indian-Buffalo model is scheduled to give way to a new Thomas Jefferson coin this autumn.

FHA Increase

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Federal Housing Administration said today it accepted for insured in August mortgages totaling $97,877,900, an increase of 12 per cent over July and of 81 per cent over August, 1937. About 70 per cent, it said, covered new homes.

The reports were made by the War Department and the Federal Power Commission in response to a request by the Chief Executive. "These studies," Mr. Roosevelt writes, "have disclosed a shortage of power to meet the needs of the nation's industry in the event of war such as constitute a serious threat to the national security."

War, to the American, has been for more than half a century something fought a long way off. American men have lost their lives, but American territory has remained safe. But if a general war should ensue, under present conditions, no country is safe.

Defense is necessary. But every means possible should be used to avoid war.

WHAT CHILDREN LIKE

We are getting basic facts about all sorts of human likes and dislikes nowadays, and thereby getting valuable business information. Take fruit for example. A recent questionnaire asked what kinds of fruit children prefer. Nearly 10,000 children replied. The results should interest growers and dealers.

Of six important fruits, the largest number, 30 per cent, chose apples. Oranges got a 20 per cent vote, peaches 18 per cent, peaches 12 per cent, grapefruit 10 per cent, and raisins 9 per cent. Apples are also known, from previous inquiries, to be the favorite fruit of American grown-ups. Their appeal is evidently secure. So is that of oranges, which like apples appeal in color and form as well as taste. The prune vote is a surprise. Who would have imagined that children prefer prunes to peaches? Maybe it is because, in cities, many have had little experience of peaches. The appeal of grapefruit seems to be chiefly to grown-ups.

Generally speaking, fruits that people like as children they may be expected to continue liking.

We'd like to think, anyway, that the Monroe Doctrine of peaceful unity and self-defense blankets this hemisphere. Monroe's time was the Era of Good Will, and we ought to get that sort of thing once in a hundred years.

THAT BODY OF YOURS
By James W. Barton, M.D.

When glasses were first used the main thought was to magnify or enlarge print or other object so that it could be more readily seen. Gradually glasses were improved so that short-sightedness or long-sightedness was corrected, then astigmatism (where rays of light do not focus to a single point due to a defect in the curvature of the lens of the eye), then weakness of any of the muscles controlling the eyeball; finally double vision lenses, one for reading and one for distance, were produced, and finally contact lenses which are fitted beneath the eyelids and do away with the need of frames.

It would seem that there is some process of development in progress giving aid to those who are hard of hearing. We all remember the large horn that the hard of hearing carried not so many years ago, which was held toward anyone trying to speak to them. Just as the first glasses magnified, or increased the ability to see an object, so the horn increased or gathered the sound so that it could be more readily heard. Then followed various types of hearing aids, electrical and mechanical, some of which helped certain cases but were unsatisfactory to others. And just as glasses for the eyes were made to correct more than poor or weak vision, so the new aids for hearing are now manufactured to correct different "types" of hard of hearing.

An editorial in Laryngoscope states: "Great improvement in electric hearing aids are being made with surprising rapidity. Among recent advances in this field the most important is the development of 'selective' amplification (increase in the hearing) by which the units of a portable carbon microphone hearing device of variable amplifying power at different pitches are assembled in such combination as will best meet the special requirements of the individual as shown by his audiogram."

The audiogram is a chart on which the audiometer (the hearing test machine) has marked the hearing ability of the individual at different ranges of sound.

The day has now arrived when our specialists are able to advise the patient as to his needs and these needs can, to a great extent, be met by these new hearing devices.

THE CLOUDED MOON

The Characters
Hugo Stern, handsome author, living on the French Riviera.
Archibald Lumsden, myself, Hugo's friend.
Ottile Willis, beautiful American heiress.

Yesterday: Venner turns me that I'm in danger and must leave France. When I refuse he has a heart attack. Later I spot a hotel servant as one of Geiss's killers.

Chapter 30
Murder At Night

HUGO, Dunning and Ada were waiting for me in the courtyard of the chalet. All three of them wore an air of anxious expectancy, and as I sank gratefully into a chair Dunning said: "It has occurred to me that, if we don't succeed in averting the trouble, Ottile and Mr. Willis would be mighty glad of some quiet place to retire to, until the fuss blows over; or even—" he hesitated—"in a certain eventually Ottile might come alone; and Miss Ada has kindly said she'll be prepared for them at any hour of the day and night."

His words were like cold water on my spirits. Until then, I don't think I had seriously envisaged the possibility of failure, but now, as I saw how gravely he viewed our chances, I knew for the first time what fear was.

"Look here, Dunning," I said, "isn't it about time that we did what any ordinary person would have done in the first place and went to the police with what information we have?"

He sucked reflectively at his big cigar. "And just what," he asked mildly, "can we offer them in the way of concrete facts?"

I was silent for a moment and the more I thought, the more fully did I realize that there was nothing, literally nothing, that we could produce as documented fact. I suppose that my chagrin showed on my face, for the big man leaned forward heavily and patted my shoulder.

"Son," said he, "don't you think I've been worrying over that difficulty since the first minute I got here? Mr. Willis is being guarded, as well as the local police know how, against the average accidents that could befall an American citizen in a foreign country. But if we ask them to keep an eye on Geiss or Stahl or Venner, we can give no proof of what we believe."

He dropped back, like a man suddenly tired, and drained his glass, and as Hugo refilled it, he turned to me again. "There's another point that is doubtless in your mind—why we haven't told Mr. Willis himself of his niece's death, and the rest of the game that's going on. Well, that's a question that's given me a lot more sleepless nights, but I've the same answer for both queries. You've heard what Ottile says of her uncle; you can guess the kind of man he is, and I tell you this. If once he knew what had happened to his niece, he wouldn't rest until he had found her murderer. He'd remove any chance we have of helping him, and he wouldn't save himself."

I sighed. "You're damnably right," I said. "If I could only get my hands round Geiss's neck."

Dunning nodded grimly. "And I don't mind admitting that a quiet bit of assassination is a solution that has often presented itself to me, though it's not so easy as it sounds, but meantime what we want is the major evidence."

"And that is?"

"The gun," said he. "The second gun—the gun that killed poor Pat. If that could be found—on his premises—I'd have a good enough case to go to Paris with. Of course, the police would be disposed of long ago, but there's a factor in our favor—the man's colossal vanity. I firmly believe he doesn't credit there's a single living thing with the brains to see through him, and on that assumption there's just a chance he's still got the gun."

Rakovsky

THERE fell a heavy silence that Hugo finally broke. And to think, said he, "in the heart of that damned villa this afternoon! If we'd only tied up the fellow and searched the place!"

"And got into a nasty bit of trouble if you'd found nothing," commenced the American. "No, no, Mr. Stern, we'll never win out on those methods. Son"—he turned to me—"I'm anxious to hear your news, but let me recapitulate what I've been telling Miss Ada and her brother here. That was a useful bit of observation of yours, when you sighted that singularly unpleasant lady, Miss Adams, going off for her journey. Mr. Stern passed on the intelligence to me, and I set my men on the trail of the car. It belongs, and I don't fancy you'll be surprised to hear it, to a gentleman named Vladimir Rakovsky, who inhabits a small villa in a hamlet named San Lorenzo. From now on it will be my pleasure and privilege to see that he does not stir a foot outside it without I know where he's heading."

I whistled. Then it was he I saw with me," said I, with a sudden and not too pleasant recollection of the pale face and prominent eyes I had glimpsed for an instant through the window of the car.

"Precisely," agreed Mr. Dunning.

Dripping Red.

I CREEPT to the door, listened intently, and then, with immense precaution, turned the key in the lock. As I opened the door silently, I saw that the passage outside was filled with the gray half-light of dawn, but it was completely empty; and then, a little way to the right, with a stealthy quiet that made a pulse leap in my throat, a door began to open.

Inch by inch it moved and I stood watching it, holding my breath. I could not think what room it was, for the rest of the corridor beyond was in shadow, and I could not count the doors; but this door was clearly lit, and as I watched something appeared round the edge, pushing it wider—something that sent a cold shiver of horror sluicing down my spine. It was the fingers of a man's hand, heavy-knuckled, white-skinned, but they were not all white, for the nail-tipped red on the marble flags below.

In one swift stride I was back inside my own room with the door shut and locked and my ear to the crack. For a moment all was still, and then I heard a small ominous sound that I knew to be the broken tile in the passage outside giving under a stealthy tread.

There was no more sleep for me that night. Something horrible had happened but I dared not try to discover the truth, for my own life, and Hugo's and Dunning's, were all that stood between the old man Virgoe Willis and a similar fate.

Just as my watch showed seven, I heard footsteps outside and, peering cautiously round the window, saw that the housekeeper was crossing the gravel sweep with long, nervous strides towards the gate. A minute later a thin figure in dark trousers and a loose white jacket followed after her; I recognized the mop of waving, tow-colored hair and shuddered involuntarily. It seemed a reasonable hour to make my appearance, and I started at the investigation I had arranged to make long ago. I pulled on my bathing-trunks, flung a towel round my neck, and ran down, through a deserted house and garden, to the white beach and the sparkling water.

After a gorgeous half-hour of swimming, floating, and laziness, I lay on my back. The hall and lounge were still empty, but as I came up the stairs to the second floor, I saw at the far end, outside Mr. Venner's door, the stout, blue-veined figure of Amédée, armed with a breakfast tray.

He turned as he heard my step, showing a troubled face. "Bon jour, monsieur!" he called, and then set the tray carefully on the floor and came at a lumbering trot towards me. "Monsieur will excuse," he said, fumbling nervously at his apron. "It is unsuitable that I approach him, but I know that he is a friend of the patron."

"Well, what is it?" I asked curiously.

He hesitated. "I am a little alarmed," he admitted. "For fifteen minutes I have knocked at the door of the patron—and there is no reply."

Washington Daybook
By ROBERT FECHNER
Director, Civilian Conservation Corps

WASHINGTON—Initiation of the Civilian Conservation Corps program has provided the nation with a brand new and extremely useful force for saving life and property in emergencies, such as floods, forest fires, hurricanes, severe storms and accidents.

Selection of this character, with the exception of forest fire fighting, were not included in the original program of work activities for the corps. However, the wide distribution of the CCC camps and the facility with which enrollee units could be mobilized for quick action made it inevitable that the CCC would be called upon for aid.

The Modern Minute Men

In a word, the corps, thanks to the wide distribution of its 1,500 camps, its well-trained organization, its strategically located supplies of foodstuffs, clothing and working tools and its will to serve, has become a highly important cog in the nation's emergency relief and rehabilitation machinery.

Each year the 300,000 men of the corps spend more than a million man-days combating floods and forest fires, conducting rescue, relief and rehabilitation work, searching for lost children, rescuing persons from drowning and answering other calls for aid.

The corps rendered valiant service during and after the Mississippi and Louisiana tornadoes in 1935; the severe eastern floods in 1935 and 1936; the Mississippi-Ohio river valley floods of 1937; the New London, Texas, school explosion in 1937 and the wreck of the Hindenburg the same year.

CCC To the Rescue

In its first five years, the corps spent more than 50,000 man-days searching for missing persons. On one occasion an 8-year-old girl became lost while picking huckleberries. Her father, assisted by other berry pickers, searched for her for two hours and then called the CCC camp at Ukiah, Ore., to ask for help. Twenty-five enrollees went to the rescue. They found the little girl alive at the foot of a mountain some six miles from where she became lost.

The CCC camps in the vicinity of Fort Douglas, Utah, rescued 100 persons, cleared more than 1,100 miles of roads and saved the lives of 200,000 head of livestock during severe snow storms in the winter of 1936-37.

By order of President Roosevelt, 24 enrollees have been awarded the certificate of valor, the highest CCC award, in recognition of "exceptionally courageous action in service."

Sundown Stories

In The Water

TOP NOTCH had been pushed over by accident into the water. At once the ducks went in after him, so did Rip, so did Willy Nilly, so did the bears, and even Sweet Face was about to plunge when Willy Nilly lifted Top Notch on his shoulder and scrambled up the rock.

At that moment Christopher Columbus Crow appeared.

"What are all you doing?" "We were shouting for you. We're going home," Jelly Bear answered.

"You weren't going to swim home, were you?" asked the crow.

"Oh no, oh no," moaned poor Top Notch.

"Come, we must take him to the trailer and give him a good rub-down as the air is quite chilly with this mist," said Willy Nilly. "We can talk later."

Poor Top Notch hated to be rubbed-down as it ruffled his feathers so much.

"Of course I had to be the one who was pushed into the water," he cackled in quite a complaining tone of rooster voice. Willy Nilly could hardly blame Top Notch for feeling upset. The rooster did so hate the water, but the little man said:

"Now we've had a lovely vacation, lots of picnics, games on the sand, I've found out so much about how the sea creatures live and we don't want to spoil anything by arguments. By the way, he said as though to change the subject, "you didn't stay very long at the light house, Christopher?"

"I wasn't wanted," said Christopher meekly. "There are some things I can't do." Top Notch smiled.

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

A telephone pole never hits a truck except in self-defense.

The teacher was trying to give her pupils an illustration on the word "perseverance."

Teacher—What is it that carries a man along rough roads and smooth roads, up hills and down hills, through jungles and swamps, and raging torrents?

Tommy (after a long silence, his father being a motor-car dealer)—Please, miss, there ain't no such car.

With Violet ending in his arms. He drove his Ford—poor sili, where once he clasped his Violet. There now is clasped a Lily.

A flashy sports model, driven by a girl, shot out of a side street. The taxi driver, averted, emitting a thunderous roar of dense profanity. He promptly drove along, side the offending car and burst out.

Taxi Driver—What the bloody mischief d'ye think you're doing?

Girl (turning)—she was a sweet looking miss—What the bloody mischief has it got to do with you?

Taxi Driver (reeling in his seat, swallowing, dodging his cap, with complete sincerity)—Sorry, lady.

A cow on a curve is not half so dangerous as a curve on a call.

Traffic Officer—You were hitting 60!

Driver—But they told me I could go as fast as I wanted after the first 500 miles.

Most auto accidents occur on Saturday or Sunday. It's a great life if you don't week-end.

First Boy—My father is a brave man, he is. He killed five lions and an elephant in Africa singlehanded.

Second Boy—Bosh, that's nothing. My dad bought a new sedan when mother wanted a coupe.

Read it or not:

Washington's Farewell Address was written toward the end of his first term. When he decided to accept a second term the address was postponed.

How To Get On

To get on in the world you must work with a will.

For only the steadfast can scale life's steep hill.

To get on in the world set your self one great aim.

'Tis the man of right purpose who best plays the game.

For life is a game in which only few win.

To have a fair chance you must never give in.

To get on in the world be courageous and true.

When you nobly succeed, men will then honor you.

Gift Piece Has Special Carving

Members and friends of St. John's Church, as well as all lovers of art and craftsmanship, are invited to see the beautifully carved literature rack and table presented by the Men's Club of the church, and installed during the rector's vacation.

The rack was carved from seasoned oak by George Huber of Rosendale, and is in gothic style, with the symbols of the four evangelists, St. Matthew, St. Mark, St. Luke and St. John in intaglio, and numerous other interesting designs.

Mr. Huber, whose careful and devoted workmanship is brought to a high degree of perfection in this latest example of his art, was born in Alsace in 1872, and came to America in 1900. In his youth he studied both stone and wood carving with an ecclesiastical furniture concern in Europe.

During the past 15 years Mr. Huber has been called to West Point for all the stone carvings done at the Military Academy. He has also done the marble reliefs on the Francis Scott Key Memorial at Baltimore, Md., the marble figures on the pediment of the Dime Savings Bank in Brooklyn, the stone carvings on the Art Galleries at New Haven and the Missouri State Capital in Jefferson City, Mo.

The literature rack, as well as the organ screen which Mr. Huber did last year, may be seen at St. John's Church, which is open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily.

If You're Nervous Be a Success at It

Turn "Nerves" into Glamour

Lovely Frances! It's hard to believe she was ever a victim of worry and hysteria. Yet now that she's found the secret of relaxation and nerve control, she is poised and glamorous.

Too many high-strung people remain lifelong slaves to "nerves" because they don't know how to direct their abundant energies.

How to escape insomnia, worry and temper, and redirect energy? Overcome insomnia by learning to relax one group of muscles at a time—fingers, arms, legs. Go limp as a rag doll.

Banish worry by going for a walk or to the movies. Go to see a friend. Buy a new hat.

Don't exhaust your energies in anger and hysteria, but turn them into such channels as tap dancing, music lessons, bicycle riding, photography. A hobby makes you interesting—straight after.

Man, people have escaped the tyranny of "nerves" by learning the underlying causes. In our 32-page booklet, a prominent physician tells you how to live radiantly and joyously, how to turn "nerves" into loveliness.

Send 10 cents in coin for your copy of OVERCOMING "NERVES" AND EVERY-DAY HEALTH PROBLEMS to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Count To Ten Before Making Business Calls

By JOAN DURHAM

AP Feature Service Writer

Do you feel awkward when you enter a business office on a personal call?

It will help if you think out the approach you'll make before you start out. Plan what you're going to tell the receptionist, what your opening topics of conversation will be. And above all, don't overstay your welcome.

A receptionist must find out three things from visitors: The name of the caller; the name of the person called for; the reason for the call.

Don'ts for Callers

You'll help her a lot—and yourself, too—if you say, for example, "I'd like to see Mr. Businessman, please. I'm Miss Hometown, a personal friend. I believe Mr. Businessman expects me."

The receptionist may ask you to sit while she gets in touch with the person on whom you're calling and becomes a messenger to take you in.

Here are a number of office-call don'ts you should respect: Don't interrupt your friend if he seems terribly busy. Let him finish his work—and then turn to you.

Don't hesitate to shake hands. Handshaking is an almost universal custom when men, or a man and a woman meet. Two women seldom shake hands, although it is a perfectly friendly thing for either to offer her hand. Kissing, even in the semi-privacy of an office, generally proves to be more of an embarrassment than an expression of endearment.

Don't ask for a personal friend by his first name. His business associates judge him by his friends and the respect in which those friends hold him. It's part of your duty to help add to his prestige.

Certain Exceptions

Do not refer to other friends of yours in the same organization by their first names either. Those two may not be friendly themselves. It is generally wise to prefix their names—if they come up—with Miss, Mr. or Mrs. Exceptions, of course, are made.

Hint to the man in the office who has a woman caller: Rise when she enters the room—just as you would in your own home.

Tipped Partials

Lend a chocolate flavor and give a sleeked appearance to the vanilla mousse or partial you're making in your mechanical refrigerator by adding half a cup of grated sweet chocolate to each three cups of the mixture.

Call for Quick Action

Seal your jellies and jams as quickly as possible—wait until they're set firm, but no longer. If they are allowed to stand too long a time bacteria may collect on the tops and cause trouble later on.

Garden Variety Bird-Nest Hair Gets 'The Bird' From Stylists

NOT THIS... says the director of the American Hair Design Institute. The birds are there just to emphasize the unbecoming back contour and the careless piling of curls on the top.

By BETTY CLARKE

AP Feature Service Writer

Not so fast, ladies. You've rushed for this bird's-nest hair-do so enthusiastically you've put it all wrong. It's all wrong, that is, as far as the American Hair Design Institute is concerned.

The institute has just held a special session to clarify the problem; awarded prizes for the right kind of up-hair to emphasize the findings.

"It's a movement upward—not placement on top," insists Louis, institute director. "Topping a bunch of curls on top is ridiculous."

Louis advocates soft waves lipped by ringlets at the side of the face—not tight curls marching all over the head in military rows.

Waves over the ears will eliminate that pulled-up look, he points out. A swirl in back will help keep a long, thin neck from looking even longer and thinner.

How can these waves and curls be kept in place? He pointed to the first-prize hair-style.

"It's hinged all around the top of the head with just a few hair pins. It's dressed properly in the beginning. There are no fasteners of any kind. No lacquer. Not even wave set. We just use plain water and a few hair pins. If the hair is done properly it will stay that way."

One or two ornamental combs that fit into the general contour of the hair-style are all right.

"But PLEASE," pleads Louis, "not ten or fifteen combs stuck all over the head—and STILL not holding the hair up."

Louis insists that the upward hair-style is here to stay.

"I predicted it in 1936," he says, pointing to a book full of clippings. "And," he boasted, "I can predict what the style will be in 1939 and 1940."

This is his prediction: A coiffure extremely high in front with pin curls, combed to give an old-fashioned pompadour effect, just above the forehead.

"Very feminine," Louis concludes.

BUT THIS... The hair above the ear should be softly waved to avoid the pulled-up effect hairdressers are objecting to. This coiffure won first prize for a modern hair-do.

Helps for Housewives

To remove mustard stains from washable fabrics merely wash the stained area in warm water and mild soap suds. Stains may be removed from non-washable fabrics by rubbing them gently as soon as possible with warm glycerine applied with a small sponge or cloth.

Mint gelatin mold topped with salad dressing or mayonnaise makes a tasty accompaniment for lamb, hot or cold. Make a regular mint gelatin, then when it is cool, add some sliced cucumbers, diced celery and minced green peppers or plantains.

Allow peaches, pears, apricots or plums to ripen at room temperature. Then store them, uncovered in a shallow tray or metal container in the refrigerator. Don't crowd the fruits. That's likely to bruise or soften them, causing quick decay.

Here's a simple way to wash windows. Dip a chamomile skin into hot water and wring it quite dry. Rub it over the window quickly. Wait several minutes, then wipe the window with a clean, soft chamomile skin.

Starch slip covers a little when you launder them. That will make them a little more glossy and give them more body. They'll keep clean longer. Never use bluing on colored or flowered slip covers.

Grated raw carrots give cabbage salad added color and flavor. Mined green peppers or plantains will do the same for creamed potatoes, turnips, cauliflower, lima beans or corn.

The water in which vegetables are cooked usually contains valuable minerals and helps to make nourishing soups.

The earliest known method of baking bread was to lay the mass of dough on hot stones and to cover it with glowing ashes.

Make The Soup Course 4-Star With Home-Made Accessories

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE

AP Feature Service Writer

Serving soups time after time with the usual salted wafers or oyster crackers does get monotonous. You vary the soups, of course, but there are lots of housewives who never vary the trimming.

Stars

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sharp cheese, grated
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup dry bread crumbs

Cream the butter and cheese together. Add the dry bread crumbs and mix well. Cut white or whole wheat bread into star shapes with a small cookie cutter. Spread with the cheese mixture and toast a delicate golden brown under the broiler.

Savory Pinwheels

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sharp cheese, grated
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon catsup
1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce

Cream the butter and cheese together. Mix well and add the other seasonings. Slice bread (preferably day old) about an eighth of an inch thick. Spread generously with the cheese mixture. Roll like a jelly roll and fasten with toothpicks. Wrap in waxed paper and chill for half an hour or longer. Just before serving, cut off in quarter-inch slices and toast under the broiler until a delicate brown.

Cheese Balls

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sharp cheese
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup dry bread crumbs
Yolk of one egg

Cream the butter and cheese and mix until creamy. Then add bread crumbs and egg yolk. Form into balls about the size of a small marble. Roll in crumbs, fry in deep fat.

These are good with any soup, and very good with tomato, vegetable, asparagus, celery, pea, consommé and vegetable-beef.

And there is such a variety of pungent, home made tidbits one can prepare that a simple bowl of soup always can come to the table with a new appeal.

Some Starters

Here are a few of the many possibilities for soup accessories:

Spread thin biscuit dough with anchovy paste mixed with a little cream. Roll into one and one-half inch rolls and cut off half-inch slices. Pop a trayful into a moderate oven until they are well-browned. Serve piping hot.

You can change off on this trick in many of these combinations: chopped ham, mixed with savory salad dressing; chopped, ripe olives combined with sweet pickle relish; grated cheese mixed with horseradish; or blended chili sauce and sardines.

For real taste pleasure try this: Cream together half a cup of butter, a third of a cup of grated cheese, one cup of flour and a fourth of a teaspoon of salt. Roll the dough out very thin. With a crinkly-edged cutter, cut out sections of the dough. Spread them lightly with chopped, salted peanuts seasoned with celery salt, paprika and minced parsley. Fold half over and prick the tops. Bake until browned. Serve warm.

Grated Cheese

Spread buttered crackers with grated cheese that has been lightly flavored with garlic and celery salt or spread thin pastry with a savory ham relish. Bake either until browned.

For something especially crunchy, add chopped, browned bacon to any topping.

Like chili con carne? Tiny squares of hot cornbread are a perfect mate for chili con carne, muligatawny or old-fashioned chicken soup.

Hint to Dough-Makers

The next time you mix pie dough, double the quantity. Wrap the surplus tightly in waxed paper and store it in the refrigerator. Then you'll have it handy during the week to cover pot pies, make into patties for leftover meats, vegetables or dessert combinations. Part of the dough may also be rolled out, spread with brown sugar and spices and rolled up, cut off into thin slices and baked until well-browned. If you like cheese, sprinkle a little over another bit of rolled-out dough. Cut it into straws and bake them. Serve with soups, salads or beverages.

Cookie Topping

Mix one cup of grated maple sugar, one teaspoon of cinnamon, two tablespoons of butter and one tablespoon of hot cream. Use the combination to top cookies, drop or layer cakes. For an extra touch, sprinkle chopped nuts over the frosting.

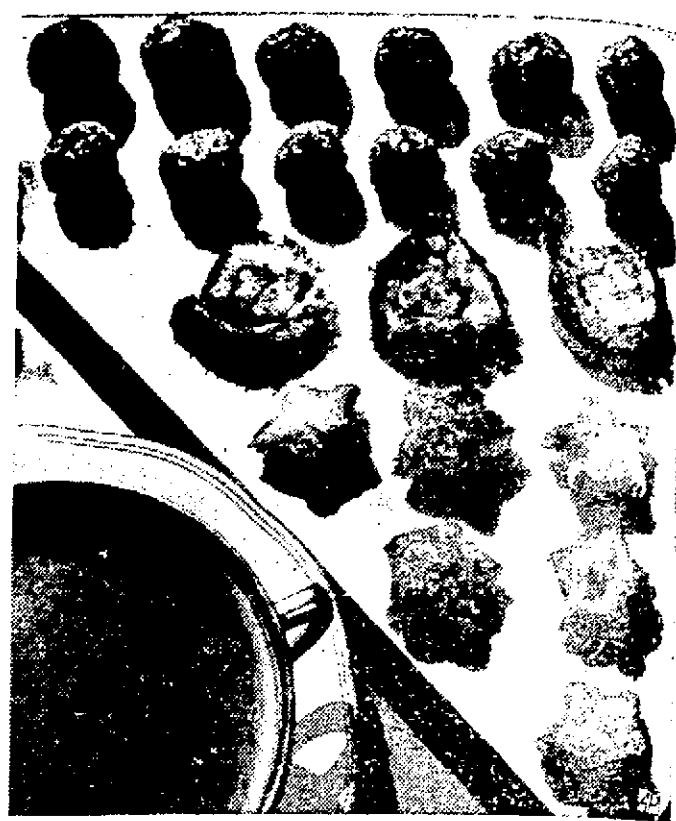

An Eye to Christmas

Start putting up some of your special jams, jellies, pickles and relishes for Christmas gifts. Use fancy-shaped containers or jars you have saved especially for this purpose. Save the wrapping until the holiday period, however, so the packages will be fresh.

Sauce for Rice

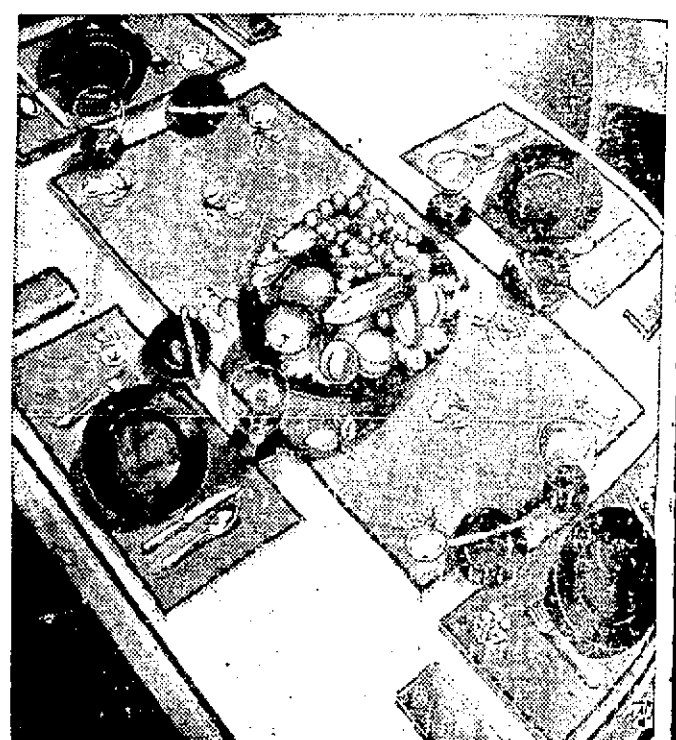

Add a few chopped ripe olives to regular tomato sauce for serving on hot boiled rice, hominy, macaroni or spaghetti. The combinations are suitable for either luncheon or supper serving.

To remove French dressing stains, sponge the spot with cool water to flush out the vinegar; then when the material is dry, sponge it lightly with carbon tetrachloride to get rid of the grease.

Stars, pinwheels and savory cheese balls make attractive garnishes for soups.

Put A Fruitful Harvest On Your Luncheon Set

Prepare for fall luncheons by making a colorful table set with appliqued fruit decorations.

By ELISABETH MAY BLONDEL transfer, you can cut as many patches as you need.

(Prepared by McCall's Magazine for The Freeman)

A dramatic meal needs a dramatic setting. If you are tired of the way your table has been looking lately, why not try a new applique fruit tablecloth or luncheon set?

On a rich red linen, applique the fruit in white, touched with black embroidery, and with edges bound in red linen, bound with black and monogrammed in white. Can you see these with black glass plates and centerpiece and clear glasses with black bases?

The applique patches can be stamped with a hot iron transfer. The pieces are turned at the edges, basted and hand-stitched to the cloth with invisible stitches. If you make a brown paper pattern from the transfers, you can cut as many patches as you need. The fruit may be done in patches of natural colors, with green leaves, the sewing cotton matching the colors. This effect is charming on a cloth of white, low or pale green.

Linen may be used for the plaques as well as the cloth. The designs may be stamped on fine gingham and used on a cloth of the same material, or on bleached muslin, cotton broad cloth or cotton with a linen finish. Of course, the fruit patches must be color-fast.

Grapes, strawberries, peaches, lemons, pines, cherries, apples, oranges and small pumpkins can be stamped on the cloth. The pieces are about 2 1/2 by 3 inches. For a delightful centerpiece, the luncheon set or tablecloth designs may be used on a small tablecloth or on the dining room curtains.

Fall Brings A Brace Of Suit Styles

FITTED JACKET

Two types of suits have come to town for fall: The sleek tailleur with a jacket and skirt, and the costume suit which seats a jacket over a dress. Here you see a tailor of rose-brown and black diagonal wool cut with a long fitted double breasted jacket with collar and high lapels of black velvet. It is worn with a twisted black felt toque and black accessories. (Suit designed by Robert Lang.)

STRAIGHT JACKET

The costume suit appears here in fine black wool trimmed in black Persian lamb, and worn with a green felt cuff hat. The frock is simple and slim, the jacket straight. Its fur trimming gives a high collar-like neckline. Other costume suits which have made their debut in New York combine a frock and fitted jacket to match made of deep teal blue (greenish blue), fog blue and wine wools.

Kosta Arrested In Gaming Raid

"Boss" Kosta, also known as Dominic Costa and Dominic Kosta, who is alleged to have been operating a gambling establishment in the Montrose section of the city, was arrested today by police in a raid on the establishment. Kosta is free on bail.

Seven of the group were held as operators of the gambling parlor and were admitted to $1,500 bail while 22 questioned by the officers were released after their statements were taken by District Attorney J. Hines.

Light men in all were held operators of the Montrose gambling parlor, but only Henry Schulman, a former Montrose policeman, was released in custody of his attorney, Morris M. Oppenheimer.

According to officers the group in the place at the time of the raid included the mayor of a suburban county village, several bus and truck drivers, police men and taxi drivers. A number of hotel employees were also questioned by the police. Most of the group held as operators of the place have New York addresses, the police said.

The raid was planned dramatically. Special Deputy Sheriff W. J. Griesbach of Jeffersonville entered the room at 3 o'clock and at 5 o'clock a van backed in the alley under pretense of delivering fish. Ordered away the truck continued to back to the entrance door where a squad of police jumped from the van and entered the premises with drawn guns.

Water Department Is Shy With Payments, Expert Says

Water county residents whose properties are being taken for the construction of the new water works system for New York city are not being paid enough for their properties, according to Robert M. M. Burnett, water works engineer of St. Vernon, who has been making a survey of the upper Rondout valley.
Mr. Burnett said that our forefathers knew the value of water. All their settlements were built where water was plentiful, and these waters were jealously guarded by the community.
"Today," he said "you read of the great irrigation dams being built to reclaim arid lands to make them more productive. In other localities great cities are building dams to supply them with water. What is going to happen to a community if it does not have a good water supply for drinking and to make the land fertile?" he asked.

"Now that New York city is again disrupting the water supplies of communities it is not time that a little research be done to protect the towns and their water supplies?" As things look on the surface, he said, New York city seems to have things their own way—that is, they have bought the rights in the Westchester, Putnam and Ulster counties, and their tunnels cross parts of Dutchess and Orange counties.

"Now the question is," he said, "what can we do about it? Most people will tell you there is nothing that you can do. This is not so as we have rights that most people have forgotten about."

"Are property owners going to wait until the water is gone or are they going to protect themselves before it is too late?" he asked.

Mr. Burnett said that history is repeating itself. New York city is again acquiring rights at the extreme penalty of local communities by use of unjust force measures and without the consent of, and proper remuneration to, the present owners.

According to Mr. Burnett land owners, who are giving New York city the right to carry the aqueduct across their lands were not being paid a sufficient remuneration. He said that the blasting necessary in building these tunnels may open new seams of rock strata which will allow the water from the wells and streams to seep away, causing wells to dry up and may absorb the flow of a lake.

Mr. Burnett said he had visited the upper Rondout valley at the request of lawyers representing some of the property owners who have filed claims with New York city.

Boston Testifies On Dodge Order

The American Bar Association, called by Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker to counter testimony that Dodge was "influenced, intimidated or bribed" by Hines, for years a powerful Tammany Hall leader, as the state charges.
Boston said that in March, 1934, Dodge summoned him in connection with an investigation of the policy gambling game—the $20,000,000-a-year Dutch Schultz enterprise which District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's witnesses have accused Hines of serving in the role of political "fixer."

Defense Campaign Resumes
New York, Sept. 10 (AP)—A defense campaign designed to hark to places District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's policy racketeering case against James J. Hines advanced swiftly into its second day in Supreme Court today.

It started yesterday with a challenge to the one piece of written evidence—a $500 check—purporting to show the Tammany district leader received a weekly fee from the Dutch Schultz policy racket which he is charged with shielding from the law.

Still unanswered today was the prime question of whether Hines himself would attempt to copy his accusers. Two public men he is charged with influencing, Magistrate Hulon Capshaw and former District Attorney William C. Dodge, will take the stand, the defense has announced.

As soon as Justice Ferdinand Pecora denied yesterday a motion which, if granted, would have thrown the state's charges out of court before they ever reached the jury, the first defense witness was ready.

Quickly thereafter, a crime laboratory was improvised in the courtroom with film projectors, microscopes, charts and enlarged photographs of disputed handwriting.

Handwriting Expert
Howard Haring, handwriting expert, said his opinion was that a "J. Hines" endorsement on the $500 check—which a state witness testified was given to Hines at the order of a member of the Schultz mob—had been superimposed on a signature below and "plunged in" between the signatures above and below.

A state witness, Milton Bernard, once Schultz' accountant, had testified that the check, which was given by him when he carried his funds in a friend's account, did not bear the Hines endorsement when it returned from the bank.

The state previously had conceded that the "J. Hines" signature was not in the handwriting of the defendant.

Attempting to show that the check had been altered in at least one particular after leaving the bank, Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker produced a film on which checks received at the Continental Bank and Trust were photographed (a common practice at banks here.)

The film showed only a printed number on the face of the check whereas the check when introduced by Dewey bore a handwritten number in ink. The film did not show the reverse side of the check where the endorsements appeared.

On cross-examination, Haring agreed with Dewey that "in many cases it is impossible to tell" which of two intersecting ink lines, as were found in the check's endorsements, were written first. His finding was a matter of personal opinion, he said.

His opinion was that an examination of enlarged photographs and a microscopic inspection showed that the "J" in "J. Hines" was written after (not before, as his position would indicate) the Holly signature.

As the session ended, Dewey agreed with Stryker on a stipulation that there has not been a window in the reception room of the office of Joseph Shalleck, a defense attorney, for six years.

That odd agreement supported Stryker's attack on the testimony of George Weinberg, Schultz' paymaster, that he saw Hines and Dodge beside such a window in Shalleck's office in 1932 when he delivered to Hines a $5,000 election campaign contribution from the racket treasury.

Brewery Razing Is Completed

The work of demolishing the old Hoffman brewery on Hone street has been completed by Everett Brothers, and it is expected that the work of taking down the large brick office building on the property will shortly be started.
The city acquired ownership of the brewery property at a tax sale. The old brewery was declared in dangerous condition and Everett Brothers were awarded the contract to take it down.
Just what use, if any, the city will make of the site is not known.

It is said that the office building on the property is also in dangerous condition and that it will be taken down also.

The Hoffman brewery had not been used for brewing for over a quarter of a century.

Rondout Dredging Scheduled to Start

at the Albany office that it is not known whether or not the full crew will accompany the boat here, and if not, local men will be hired on the job.

The crew will be in charge of Captain Page of the DeWitt Clinton dredger and the project itself, under immediate supervision of Major C. W. Ball.

A crew of surveyors has been working along the creek banks and making preliminary estimates in the creek during the week and flags were left as markings to aid in dredging activities of the crew.

The first major dredging project was done in the creek in 1851, it was stated at the Albany office, and since that time government crews have conducted maintenance work in the creek. First steps in starting the current project began in 1935, but no definite action was started until an appropriation was made several months ago. The present work will be an extension of the old project.

With an overflow of scholars still hindering the movement of Kingston High School in completion, the school officials recently adopted a plan whereby some congestion at lunch time could be prevented.

The new ruling calls for "A" Assembly students to go directly to their lunch at 12:12 and return to roll call rooms promptly at 12:20. Meanwhile, the "B" Assembly pupils go to lunch at 12:16 and return to their home rooms at exactly 12:40, while the tardy bell will ring at 12:45 o'clock.

According to Principal Clarence Dumm and other teachers this should prevent some of the congestion that has always occurred during the regular lunch session.

Mr. Dumm requests that all students who positively require two lunch periods rather than one, in case of going home to lunch, should at once see the principal and receive permission to do so.

The writer took an informal interview with a majority of the students during the past week on their opinions of this new idea and although the outcome was against it, the general inference was that it would in quick time be a much better plan.

Monday at 8:30 will usher in the regular full-time periods and Principal Dumm has announced that the cafeteria will be open to all students.
